Professor Jonathan Morton will be discussing the following paper, titled, "Astral Magic, Literary Theory, and Robots: Virgil the Inventor in Medieval Culture"

This paper considers the peculiar obsession with automata and magical machines in European twelfth century culture, in particular with the figure of the Roman poet Virgil. Virgil made robot archers, an early warning system for unrest in far-flung provinces of the Roman empire, bridges made of air, a bronze horse that cured other horses from illness... Such stories were found in the Latin works of John of Salisbury, Konrad of Querfurt, and Alexander Neckham and in the French romances Perlesvaus and Cleomadés and in the Belgian chronicle of Jean d'Outremeuse, as well as in medieval German.

Day 1 | Plenary Session & Reception | Friday, December 9th at 3:30PM

Inclusive Teaching Reaching More Students

Even when we care deeply about equity and inclusion, we may not be reaching as many students as we think. Diverse students bring different assumptions about you, your material, themselves and our world. Taking the time to consider inclusion issues (yes, even in STEM fields) can make you a better teacher for everyone. All good teaching is inclusive teaching, and there are some easy and practical things you can do today (like greater transparency, belonging, scaffolding and engagement) that will improve learning for all but dramatically change the experience of under-represented students in your classes.

Day 2 | Breakout Sessions & Lunch | Saturday, December 10th

All conference breakout sessions are taking place on Saturday, December 10th. Breakout sessions attendees are invited to join the Sparking Success community for lunch during the conference sessions. Sparking Success will offer face-to-face, hybrid, and virtual breakout sessions. More session details to be announced.

Equity, Diversity, and Inclusion (EDI) Climate Survey administered by the HEDS consortium (<https://www.hedsconsortium.org/heds-diversity-equity-campus-climate-survey/>) . This survey is available Oct 27-November 17 and should include students, staff, and faculty. We would like to maximize participation, for better understanding the following:

- perceptions of the institution’s climate,
- perceptions of how the institution supports diversity and equity, and
- experiences with discrimination and harassment at the institution.

Help spread the word

All people who complete the survey can enter drawings for fabulous prizes like: Saints/Pelican tickets! A year of free parking! A private study room at H-T library! Various local restaurant gift certificates! Ipad! Audubon membership! Free books! And many more!

- What is the purpose? Assess our EDI climate on campus for our students, faculty, and staff. Survey also assesses experiences of discrimination and harassment on our campus. We are working The Higher Education Data Sharing Consortium (HEDS) to administer the survey.
- How long does it take? 10-15 minutes
- How can we take it? All Tulane students, staff, and faculty will receive an email invitation from TUEdisurvey@hedsconsortium.org. There will also be links available to take the survey. Paper versions in English and Spanish will also be available.
- How will Tulane use the data? The responses are private and confidential. Data from the survey will be used to inform programs at the university and to help track the progress of other EDI initiatives on campus.
- When will the results be available? Fall of 2023
- How can I know the response rate from my school/unit? We will be providing updates throughout the survey

Getting a lot of people to complete is key to get an accurate representation of our climate
